It gives me a tremendous pleasure to be associated with a highly esteemed team of AS Dental Sciences. The journal is quite versatile in the knowledge it provides pertaining to the various strata of dentistry. Being into the field of orthodontia and an ardent research worker, I feel the subject of dentistry is a continuous learning process. A lot goes into initiating a study, collection and materialization of the samples, the statistical analysis, varied results and finally the art of writing the manuscript correctly in order for it to reach out to the world. Hence a thorough understanding at each of these stages is mandatory for an effective research work. The concept of research methodology and evidence based dentistry are not new and I anticipate the readers are already familiar with the subjects. Finally, I would like to encourage the young minds to come up with their beautiful innovative research works and reach out to us for guidance.

Wishing a great luck to all the research indulgent, always happy to help!
